

A T3 rootkyn Dream

experiences Memories stay

A walk with Aaron Straup Cope

August 26, 2012

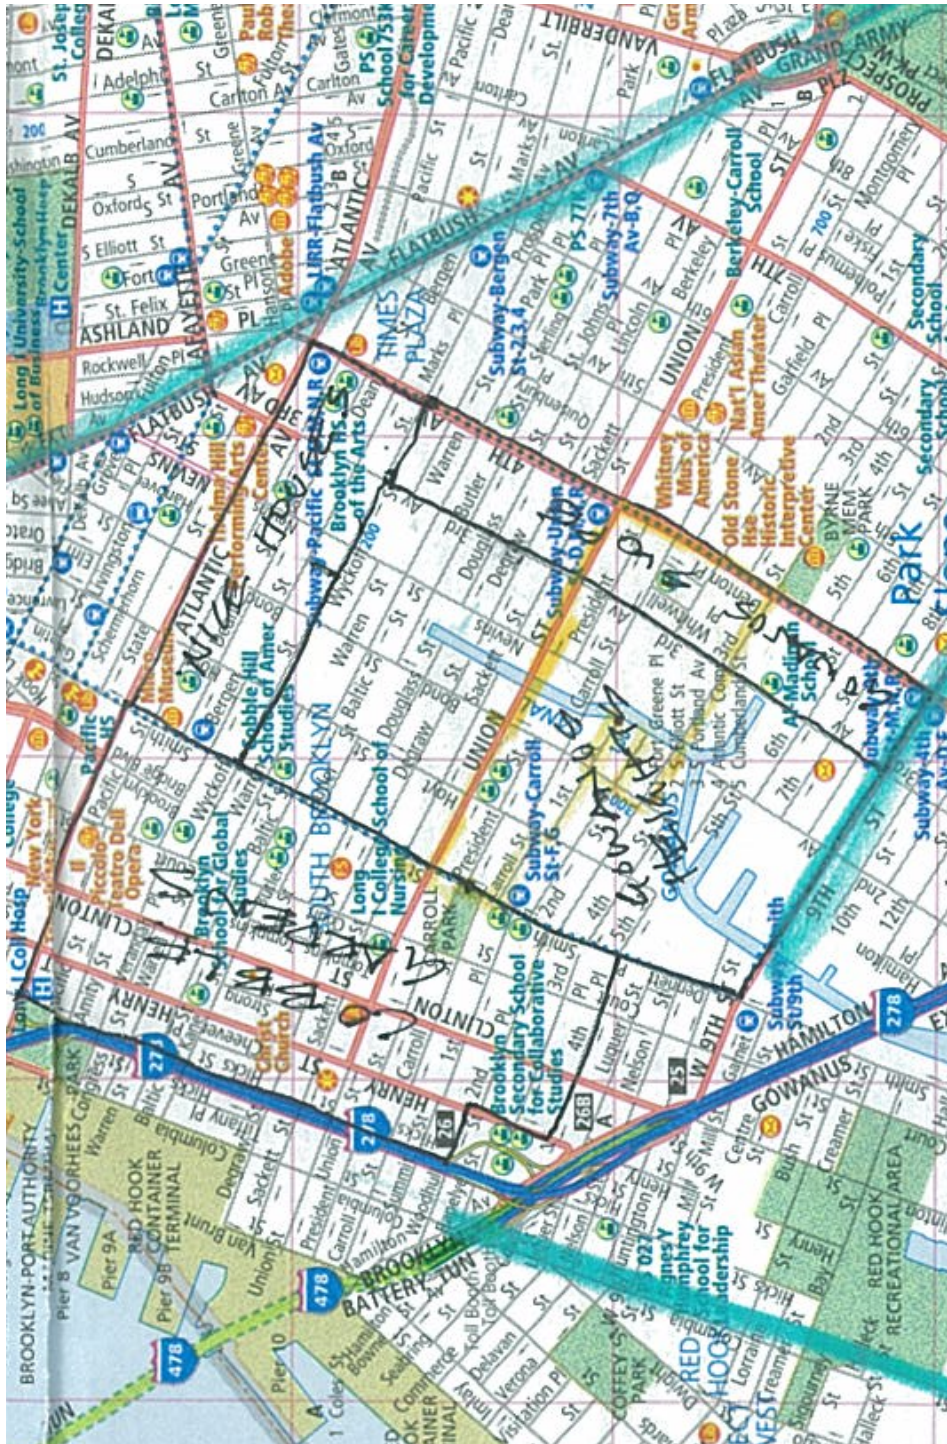

(in public imagination)

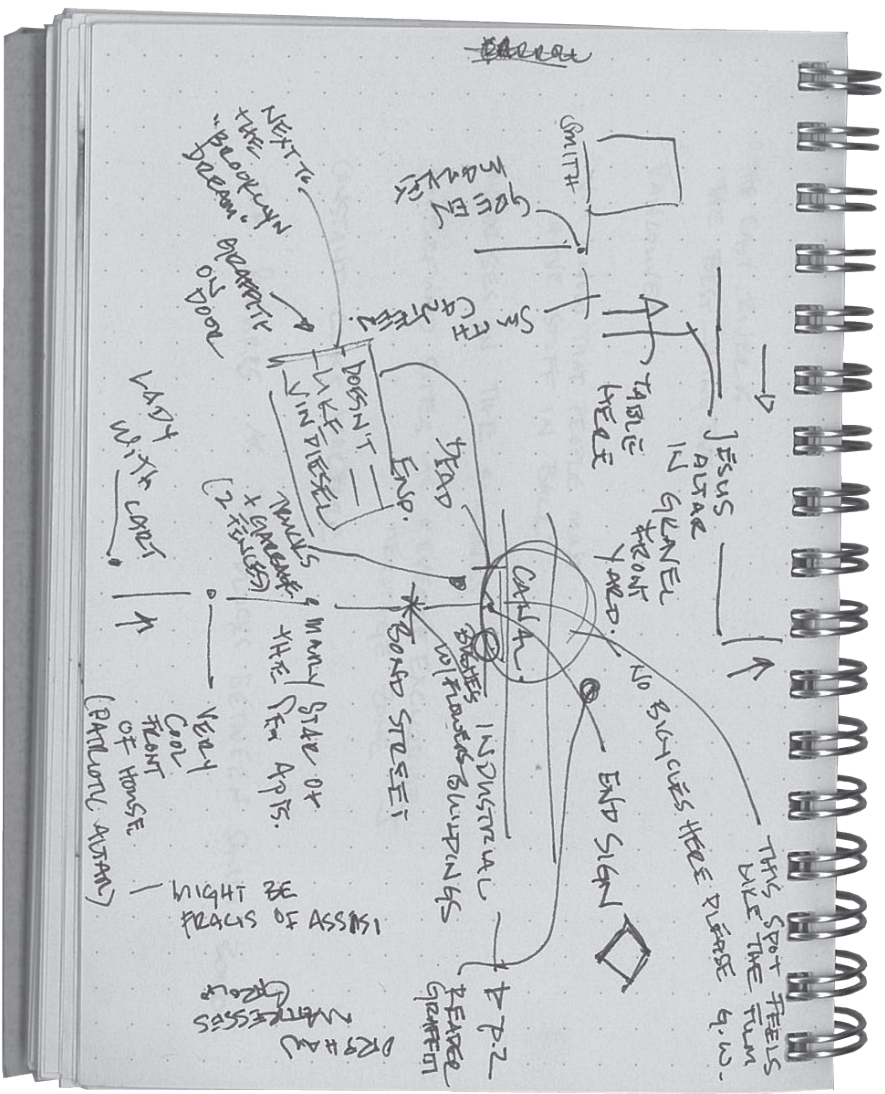

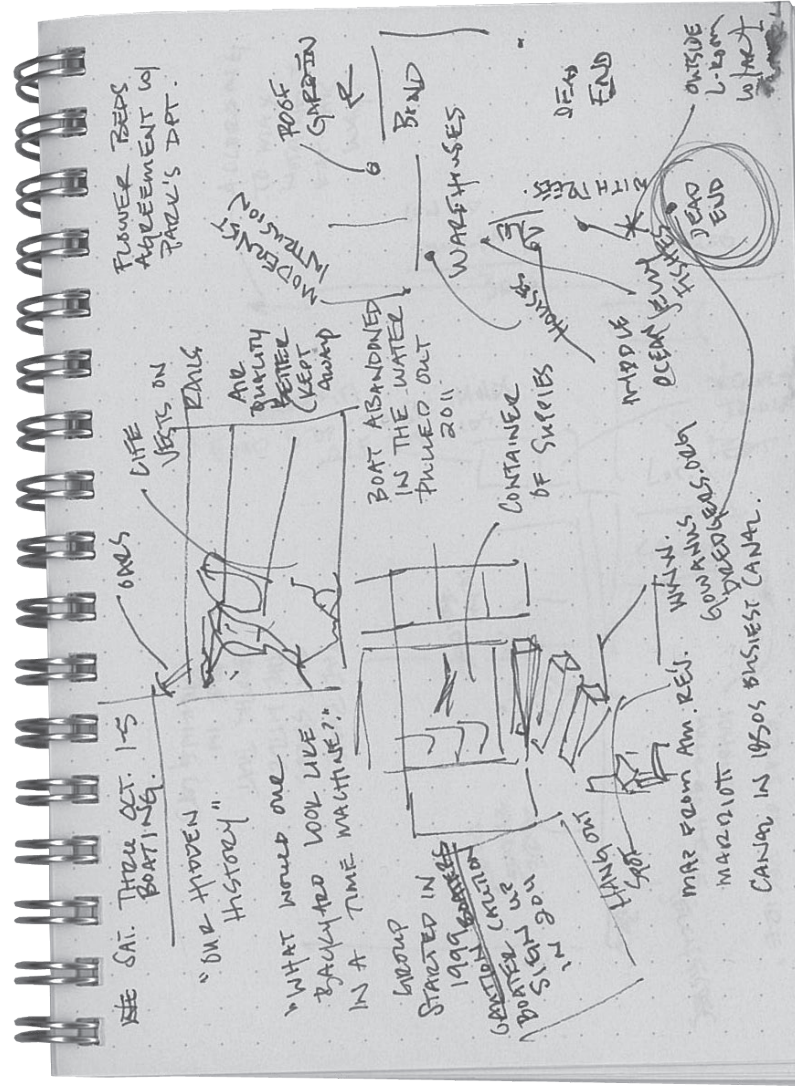

Digging out huge stretches of huge boulevards through Manhattan would make the city really interesting. If you just turned that into a huge canal and ran monorails? You'd get on in Chinatown and get off at the zoo. You'd open it up.

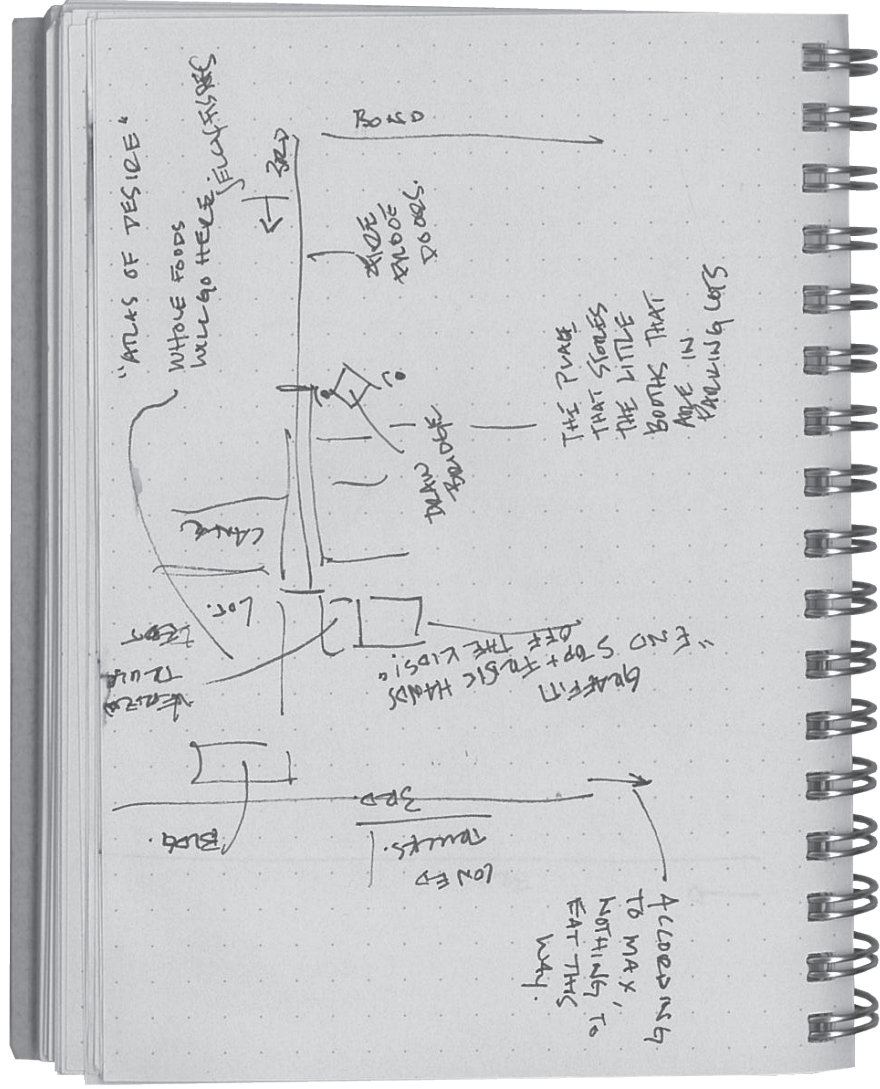

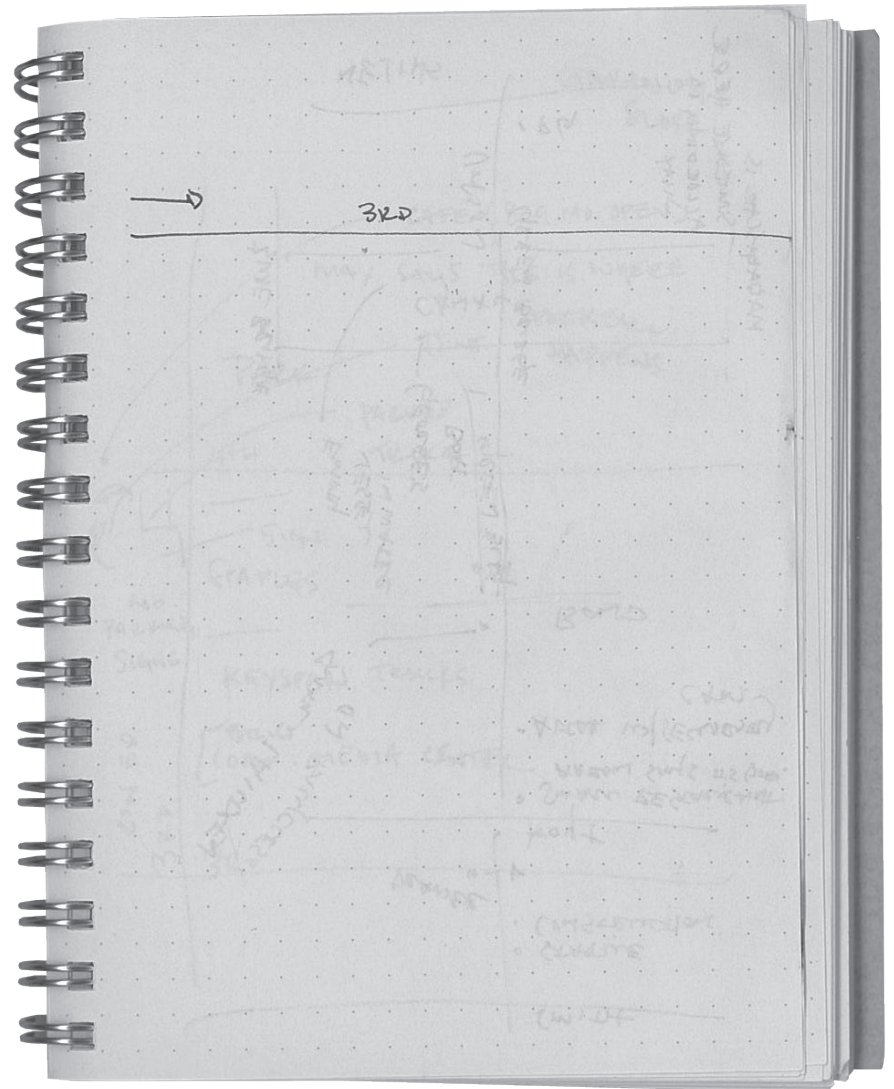

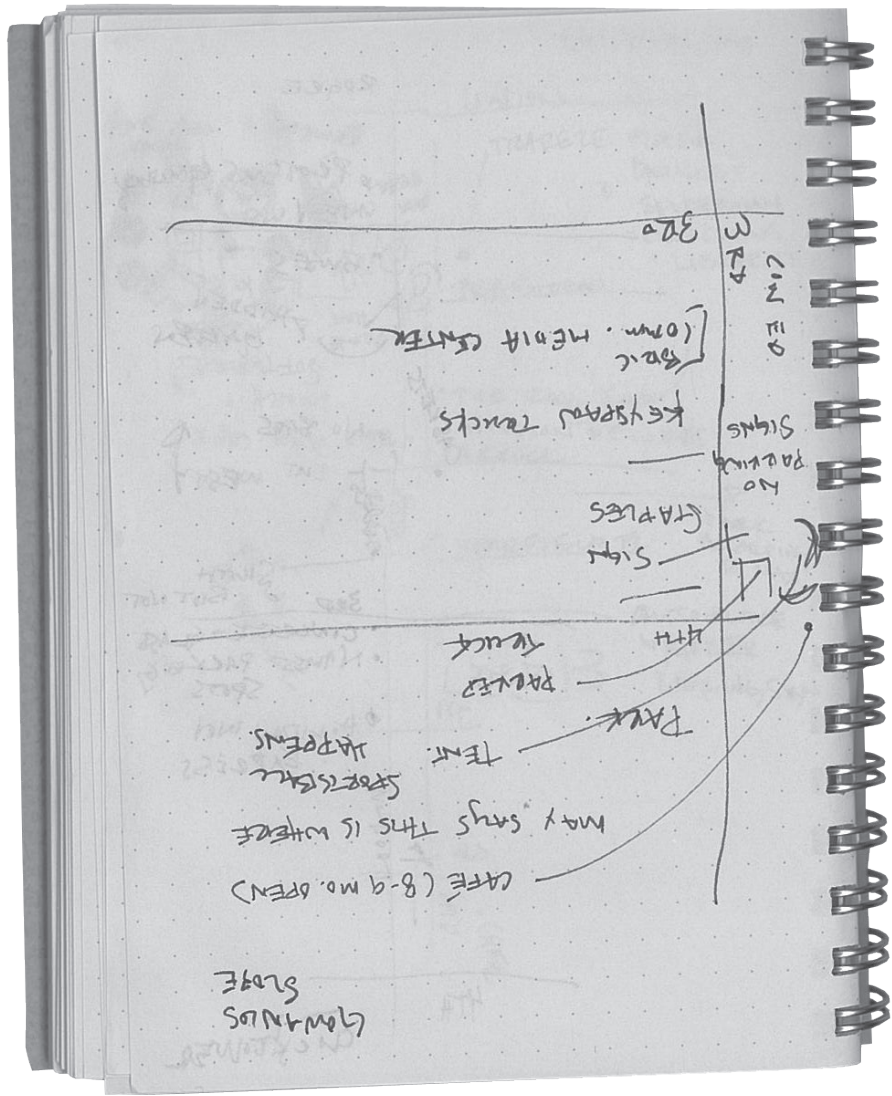

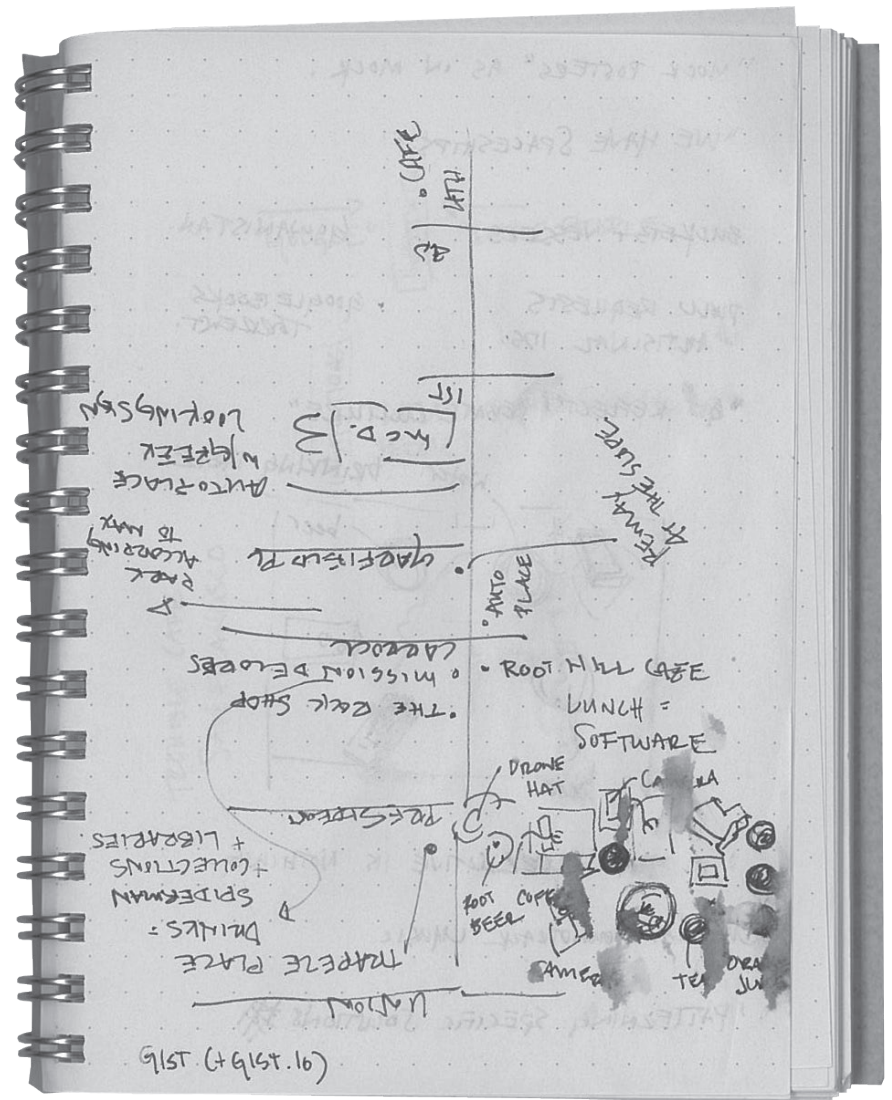

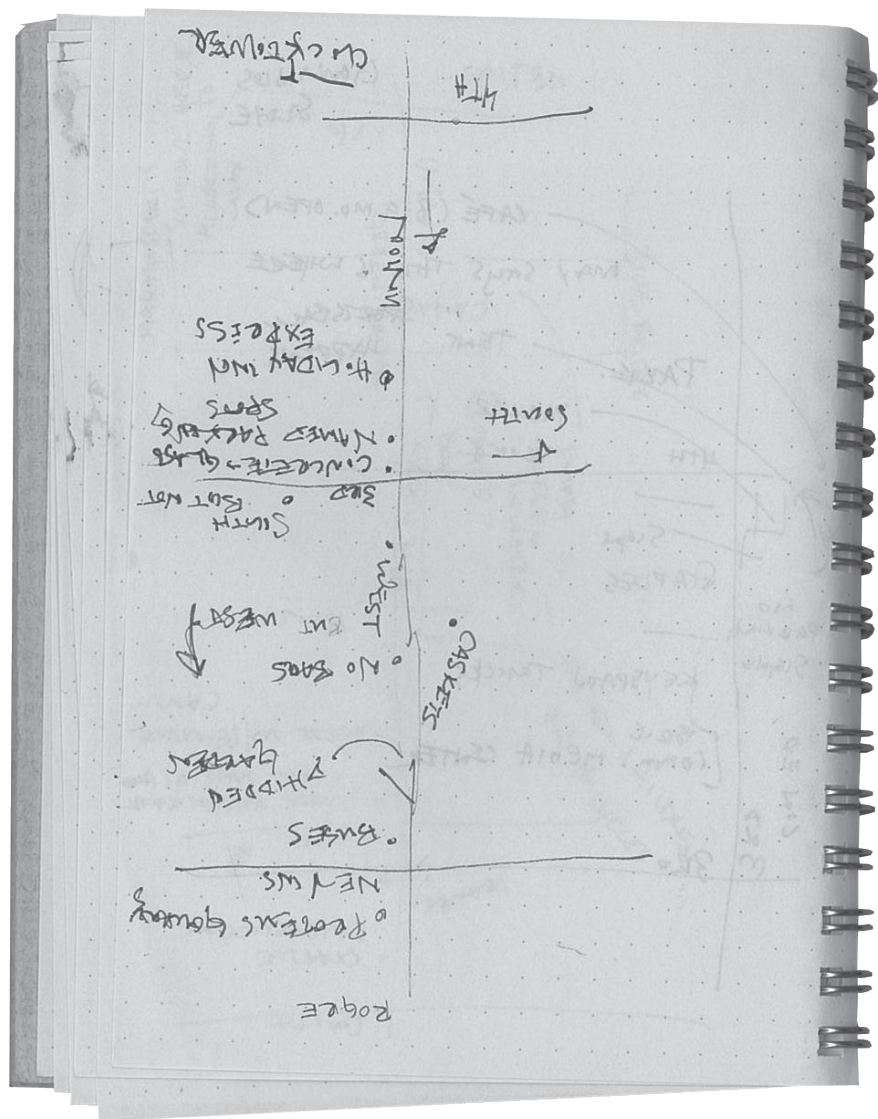

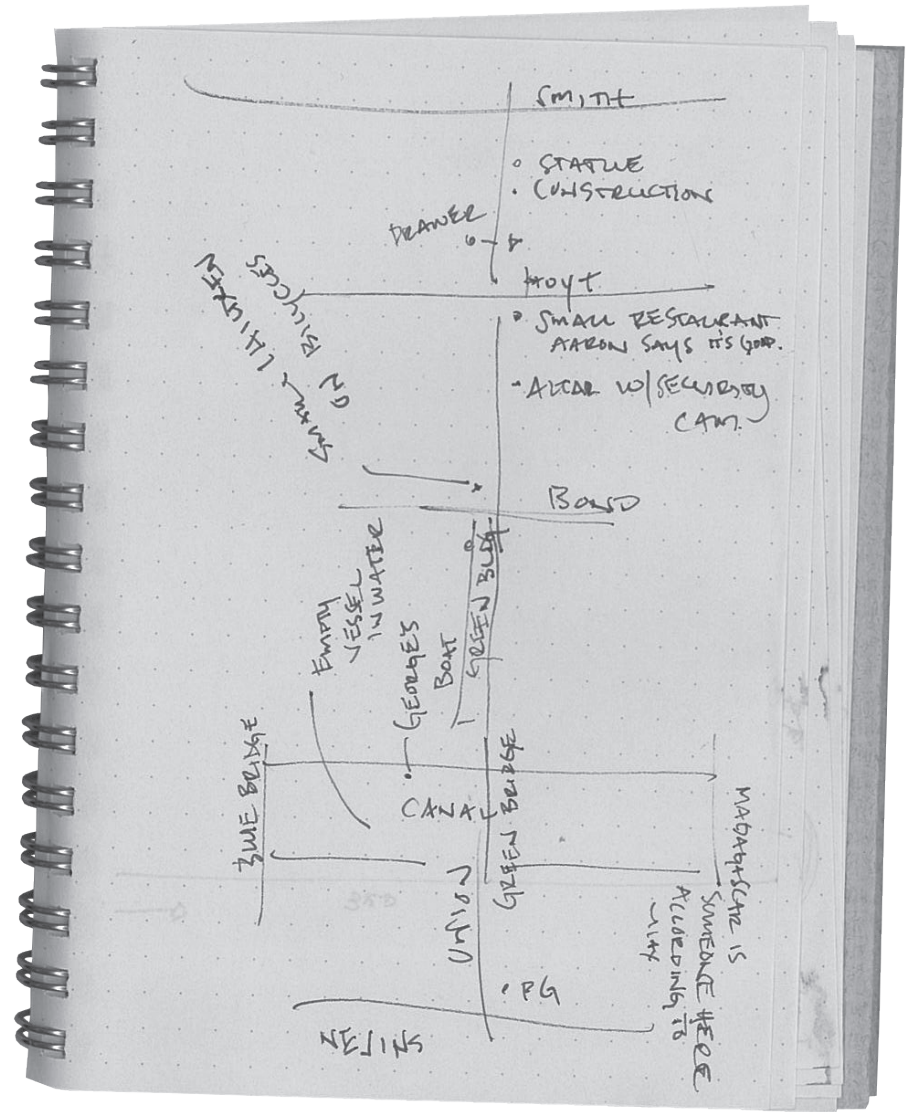

For the life of me,
I couldn't figure out
what neighborhood
I'm supposed to be in. Everyone I went to, they told me
"you're not here."

ZillowNeighborhoods-NY.json remove this document
40.495691577806, -73.9125482727273, 43.2675900246194, -73.6998272727273
gowanus-heights.json remove this document
40.671475, -73.991004, 40.686101, -73.990881
show all gowanus-heights.json, item #1

hide these properties
id : 18807771
woe.id : 18807771
woe.parent : 12589335
name : Gowanus Heights
artinsal.id : 18807771

Julia Whitney Barnes

Canal Species, 2008

a A

Julia Whitney Barnes is a Brooklyn-based, mixed media artist. Her site-specific mural, Canal Species, is based on Gowanus Canal wildlife, including a duck, seagull, heron, geese, egret, crabs, flounder, shrimp, mussels, killifish, jellyfish and a raccoon. By depicting canal wildlife, she stresses the possibilities for natural inhabitation of the canal region and a reversal of the canal's reputation as a former factory dumping zone. She created the mural at her studio located in a large converted factory building, along the Gowanus Canal.

Julia Whitney Barnes earned her Master's Degree in Fine Arts from Hunter College and Bachelor of Fine Arts from Parsons The New School for Design.

For more information, please visit www.juliawhitneybarnes.com or www.artassets.com.

Art Assets LLC
425 East 58th Street
New York, NY 10022
Tel 212 433 4747
Fax 212 433 3411
artassets@artassets.com

Artwork courtesy Toll Brothers City Living® and Art Assets LLC.

